FALL TRADING SEASON OPENS

COUNTY TAX RATE IS SET AT 60 CENTS; ROAD TAX RAISED

20 Years Ago

From The Comanche Chief, September 15, 1916

Comanche Public Schools opened the 1916-17 session last Monday with probably the largest attendance in years. The school enrollment shows for its opening day 784 and its scholastic enrollment was not 800.

The store of C. R. M. Dudley is undergoing improvement this week, having a new glass front installed.

T. O. Walton, assistant director of the extension department of A. & M. will visit the Comanche Fair and make an address.

Mrs. John Hoff and Miss Anna Belle Wilcox entertained the ladies of the Presbyterian Church Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Hoff. About 40 ladies responded to the invitation and a very pleasant afternoon was passed in social chat.

A move is afoot to have a real style show at a date in the near future. Comanche merchants want a style show. Comanche people will be interested in a style show. Details of the show haven't been made yet.

The southern and eastern portion of the county received good rains, especially at Newburg, Lamkin, and Gustine.

On September 7, Mrs. Oscar Callaway was at home to her friends from 5 to 7 p. m. in honor of her sister, Mrs. D. S. Prude of South Mansfield, La. Informal conversations were enjoyed and a buffet luncheon was served to the guests.

Kinnie Sullivan has returned Snyder where he has been working.

Tom Levisay returned Saturday to Sherman after a visit with relatives here.

Express Agent E. H. Waggoner and wife returned Saturday from a trip to Dallas and Waco by auto. It is quite a compliment to Mr. Waggoner as an autoist that he made the trip without the slightest accident.

A. J. Cobb was in our office this week and incidentally added his name to the long list of the Grand Religious Weekly readers. Mr. Cobb came here in the 80's when plank sidewalks marked the square and saloons dotted it. He says that sometimes the cowboys visited the saloons a little too often and took rides up and down those board walks. They were good days he says, but these are good days also.

Miss Estelle Reese is the guest of friends in Gatesville this week.

W. H. Rowland made a business trip to Brownwood Wednesday.

Marriage licenses: H. R. May and Miss Maude Levisay, W. E. London and Miss Addie Stringfellow, W. L. Moore and Mrs. Letitia Allen.

John Nabers of Sweetwater spent Sunday in Comanche.

The following from Comanche plan to attend Rice Institute: John D. Waring, Jr., Robert Holmway, Jack Moore, Karl Tate and Gerald Lasseter.

A double wedding was solemnized Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Stapp of Sidney when Miss Ina Redwine and George Stapp, Jr., and Miss Eva Redwine and Cliff Jones were married.

In 1880 the Federal census showed 8908 people in the county and 15,608 in 1890. In 1900 the population was 23,009, and in 1910 it had reached 27,186.

Beattie School Boy Drowns In Copperas Creek

Ralph, 7-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Mark Stephens of the Suez Community was drowned in Copperas Creek about 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon when he fell off a bridge into the swollen stream which was about half-mile wide at the point. His body had not been recovered at six o'clock.

A school boy by the name of Reed attempted to dive into the stream in an effort to rescue the boy, but his foot became caught on the bridge and he was so badly injured that he was taken to a Gorman hospital for treatment.

According to Sheriff John Reese who was called to the scene of the drowning, Hubert Kelley, Beattie teacher, who also drives the school bus, stopped the bus when he drove onto the bridge and saw what appeared to be deep water in front of him across the bridge. He instructed the children to get out of the bus and stay on the bridge while he drove into the water to test its depth. While he was gone, the Stephens child fell into the water and was never seen to come to the surface.

Local School Musical Organizations Have Nearly 100 Members

The Comanche High School musical organizations now have nearly 100 members according to Harmon Howard, Band Director. There are 38 members of the Senior Band, 35 in the Junior Band, 16 in the Drum Corps, about 30 in the Orchestra, and a Junior Drum Corps is now being organized at the Grammar School.

A bass fiddle is being added this week to the High School Orchestra this week.

A benefit show for the band will be held at the Majestic Monday and Tuesday night when "The Crimes of Dr. Forbes" will be presented on the screen.

Funds will be used to buy new caps and Mr. Howard urges all who can to attend the show and buy tickets from the boys and girls.

Blanket Fair To Be Held Oct. 17

Blanket community will hold a fall fair Saturday, October 17. Plans for the fair were announced by Blanket citizens this week. This will be the first large community fair held by Blanket in a number of years.

Executive committee in charge of arrangements is W. B. Jones, chairman; T. E. Levisay, S. E. Lacy, J. A. Keeler, Ed Mabry, Macon Richmond and I. R. Adams.

Both community and individual booths will be arranged. All exhibits will be judged Saturday, Oct. 17, at 9 a. m. No exhibits will be removed before 6 p. m.

Community and individual exhibitors wishing space should notify Mr. Jones on or before Saturday, October 10.

The community exhibits will be judged and graded on the following items: Corn, cotton, grain sorghums, oats, wheat, barley, hay, vegetables and fruits, field peas, pecans, peanuts and canned goods. This being Centennial year, the executive committee will be glad to have exhibits that relate to the history of Texas and its pioneer period.

I. R. Adams, Blanket school vocational agriculture teacher, will supervise exhibits arranged by vocational agriculture students. County Agent C. W. Lehnberg will supervise work of 4-H club boys for the fair.

Brown County Tax Rate Set At $1.00

The Brown County tax rate was set at $1.00 this week by the Commissioners Court of that county. This compares with 60 cents as set in Comanche County. The county property valuation is $13,300,000 as compared to a little more than $8,000,000 in this county.

The distribution of the Brown County tax is as follows: General 25c, jury 7c, road and bridge 15c, road bond interest and sinking fund 50c, special road and bridge fund 2 cents, court house fund 1 cent.

IDEAL "AMERICAN MOTHER" VISITS HOMELESS AT BOYS TOWN

There were soul-stirring scenes the other day at Boys Town, Nebr., when the "Ideal American Mother" of 1936, visited the 200 homeless boys at Father Flanagan's Boys' Home. Visibly affected by the sight of the 200 homeless boys as they sat before her in the Home auditorium Mrs. James Richard Smith of Claremont, Calif., the typical American mother, dabbed tears from her eyes as she began to speak.

Selected by the Golden Rule Foundation of New York for the honorary title of American Mother, Mrs. Smith made a special stop to visit Boys Town where more than 3,900 homeless and abandoned boys have been rehabilitated and sent into the world by Father Flanagan.

Standing before the homeless boys, representing all creeds and many nationalities, Mrs. Smith spoke words of encouragement to them and words of praise for Father Flanagan. As she entered the auditorium the Boys Town band burst into music. Then she listened with moistened eyes to "Mother Machree", sung by the 48-voice capella choir, one boy for each state in the Union, directed by Elief Saetveit.

Before leaving Boys Town Mrs. Smith gave the following signed statement to Father Flanagan:

TO THE PEOPLE OF AMERICA:

"Boys Town, Nebraska is an American asset. I am visiting here today for the first time but it will not be the last time. Boys Town, with Father Flanagan as its mentor, is a village of homeless boys. It is complete and modern and progressive. Here boys who otherwise would not have a chance in the world are trained mentally, spiritually and physically and equipped to become worthwhile citizens of tomorrow."

Let me say in all sincerity that Father Flanagan deserves the thanks of a nation."

Boys Town is supported solely by the public.

COUNTY BUDGET SET AT $110,003.80 FOR NEXT YEAR

Water Goes Over Spillway As Lake Eanes Fills Up

Lake Eanes was full for the first time since its construction in 1926 and water sixteen inches deep was going over the spillway Thursday at noon. The water was still rising at that time. The total rise was about 12 feet.

The swimming pool had assumed proportions of a small lake; the water extending to the cold drink stand and the girls bath house.

A small break was made in the swimming pool dam and several of the cedar trees were washed away, but the damage was considered small.

Almost a constant stream of cars carried people to view the water all day Thursday.

The lake according to J. R. Eanes, who was mayor at the time it was named, said the lake covered 140 acres when full, the greatest depth being in the channel at 34 feet and the deepest part outside the channel was 24 feet, the average depth being 11 feet.

The capacity of Lake Eanes is 1200 acre feet or approximately 500 million gallons.

The Comanche County Budget for 1937, as adopted by the Commissioners Court Monday was fixed at $110,003.80 as compared to $118,741.69 in 1936.

The budget provides $9,800 for salaries for elective officers, $3,136 for appointive officers, and $5,706 for deputies.

Most salaries are to be paid out of fees, but those who draw from the county are fixed as follows: County Judge, $1800; County Clerk, $300; County Attorney, $900; District Clerk, $600; County Agent, $600; County Health Officer, $600; County Treasurer, $2000; Sheriff $900; Janitor $600. All these officers except the County Treasurer also draw fees in addition to their salary. The main part of the County Agent's salary comes from the State and Federal appropriation.

Comanche County pays the District Court Reporter $1236 per year. Corvett and Hamilton Counties pay him only $60 per month each. The reason Comanche pays a greater proportion is that the ruling was made during the oil boom when Comanche County required a longer term of court. An effort is now being made to get the Court Reporter's salary divided equally among the three counties.

The assessed valuation this year is $8,150,000 as compared to $8,415,840 last year.

The Tax Assessor-Collector and the County Clerk are required to turn back to the county all they collect in fees in excess of $3000.00.

All but ten per cent of the world's clothing is made of cotton.

COMANCHE MERCHANTS ARE READY WITH A BIG STOCK

Charged With Petty Theft

Eugene (Big Weenie) Wines was arrested in Comanche Saturday on a petty theft charge and was still held Monday morning pending execution of bond in five theft cases.

The property recovered, according to Sheriff John Reese, included five radiator caps and a coat.

The coat was identified as belonging to Watt J. Hornberg, superintendent of Beattie Schools. Supt. Hornberg said that he left his coat in his automobile.

Another school teacher also was one of the victims. Superintendent Perry Moring of Lamkin, who identified one of the radiator caps as belonging to his auto. Others who identified their radiator caps were A. J. Williford, Mrs. Inez Creek and Charles H. Bear.

Howard Payne Opens Season Tonight At Bwood. Against TCU

Howard Payne College will open her football season at Brownwood tonight with a game with Texas Christian University.

This is expected to be the hardest game of the season for the Yellow Jackets as T. C. U. last year was one of the ranking teams in the Nation and is picked to finish fourth this year under the Williamson Ranking System.

J. M. Marshall, son of Joe Marshall, and a member of the 1931 Comanche High School Regional Championship team, is expected to start at quarter for Howard Payne. Marshall is a Senior.

Rain Will Be A Big Help Here

The excellent rain that fell over all parts of Comanche County this week will be a big help according to farmers interviewed here.

The rain came in time to insure fall grass and pastures over the good season now in the ground and many of those who already had their land prepared will begin sowing immediately.

C. F. Denny, Public Weigher, who keeps in close touch with the cotton situation in this county, said the rain would help mature late bolls and would probably more than offset any damage to the cotton.

Mr. Denny says that he believes the county cotton crop now will be almost as heavy as last year and may reach 7,000 bales.

The rain will insure a sweet potato crop where the vines are already of the proper size according to J. D. Fonville of the Ideal Food Store. Mr. Fonville, who farmer for a number of years near Clyde and worked for eight years in a government farm experiment station, said that yams would make within 21 days where the vines already had the proper growth.

Sipe Springs School Will Open Monday

The Sipe Springs School will open Monday, Sept. 21 at 9 a. m. according to Superintendent A. F. Vandergriff. Opening exercises will be held in the high school auditorium. A short program will be given, and an address made by Rev. J. W. Henderson. All school patrons and pupils are urged to be present.

A new Vocational Agriculture Department has been added to the Sipe Springs School this year. Supt. Vandergriff has been employed as teacher of that department. He began his duties as vocational teacher September 1st.

The teachers in addition to Mr. Vandergriff, for the ensuing year are E. L. Curb, and Mrs. Agnes Evans, high school; Mrs. J. W. Henderson, Miss Ellie Winters and Mrs. Dorothy Brewer, as grade teachers.

With the greatest array of merchandise assembled in Comanche within the past decade, local merchants are now ready for the fall trade which they are expecting to surpass all previous records. Most of the Comanche merchants bought their stocks early before the recent advance and state that they are going to pass on the saving to their customers.

Believing that the best way to attract trade from distant points, is to offer quality goods at prices lower than are prevailing elsewhere, the Comanche merchants are now drawing trade from all sections of the county and from many parts of adjoining counties.

Another drawing card for fall shoppers is to be able to have a large stock of merchandise available from which to make their selections. If people coming to town for certain articles and are not able to find them, they will go somewhere else the next time to do their shopping. The unusual article sought may be only a 25 or 50 cent piece of merchandise, but the purchaser often will run up his bill with other articles to take care of this situation and carry a wide range of articles. There are very few items that a shopper cannot find in Comanche.

People like to do their shopping in a town where they can meet their friends and neighbors and mix a little social affairs with their business. In other words, people like a crowd. For example, if three or four people gather in a group on the court house lawn, soon the crowd will grow to thirty or forty. The same is true with shoppers. People like to trade where other people trade. Who is there, who has not heard of the big crowd of shoppers who gather in Leonard Brothers Store at Fort Worth? Comanche for years has been noted for its Saturday and First Monday crowds. Tourists passing through Comanche almost always ask, "What is going on here?" Not only does Comanche draw crowds on these special days, but most any day in the week you can count more cars on the Comanche Square than you can on the average streets of a town of this size should you take a trip across Texas.

Most every shopper appreciates a friendly salesman or saleslady. If you buy anything and spend your hard-earned money you want the person whom you patronize to appreciate your business. This is human nature. If there is no seeming appreciation, more than likely you will go elsewhere to trade next time. The Comanche business people are known throughout this section of Texas for their friendliness. Many of the merchants have been here a long time and know nearly every one in the county. They have contributed to community enterprises and have a kindly interest in their customers. There always has been a friendly feeling between the town of Comanche and the County of Comanche. All under one name, they are one people.

which all large fortunes are built, says the Chicago News.

A person who cannot practice self-denial, can never economize. Not only are large fortunes built on economy, but most home owners and owners of small business establishments get possession of them by economizing. A person who cannot practice self-denial is often a "hot checker" and a debt beater.

Superintendent J. D. Bramlette is getting the job done. One of the things expected of Mr. Bramlette when he was employed as superintendent was to build up a friendly relation between the Comanche Public Schools and the rural schools. Not in order to take away or destroy any rural school, but to make these people feel that their children were welcome at Comanche and if they desired to send them to another school for work in the higher grades, they would want to choose Comanche. Mr. Bramlette has succeeded in bringing this about.

When pupils are transferred from a rural school to a larger school, they often find conditions different and sometimes have a hard time passing their work the first few months, but often in the end, if they stay on, make our very best students.

Superintendent Bramlette realizes this and makes it easy for them to adjust themselves the first few months instead of making it so hard for them, as to drive them out of school and perhaps keep them from finishing their school work.

For several years Comanche had a smaller enrollment than De Leon, but this year our enrollment is more than 100 greater, and also surpasses that of Hamilton for the first time within ten years.

When a young man steps on the gas, he should remember that the minutes he is attempting to save, may be his last.

A hypocrite is a fellow who pretends to believe you, when he knows you are lying.

What makes us mad, says a Comanche citizen, is that nearly all the reputed bootleggers of Comanche drive a car not later than a '35 model and most of them a '28.

Sometimes the epitaph on a person's tombstone reveals much about the deceased. This one is found on the tomb of a man in England who died from indigestion. "He had a good time, three times a day."

The goat is not given a very high social ranking among the domestic animals, but the nannie has come into its own in Lampasas County according to the Lampasas Record which issued a special 18 Page Old Settlers Edition last week which carried as a first page streamer "The Goat Has Played A Great Part In This County's Growth."

A handful of kidhair at 62 cents a pound is worth a dollar this year.

We recently saw a mohair buyer with a $2,000 check and he said that it was in payment for part of a truckload of mohair.

With the goat coming into its own and peanuts selling at 90 cents a bushel and the Comanche County cotton crop estimated at less than 5,000 bales, it can be said that King Cotton has been dethroned in this county, for a time at least.

The success of a wedding does not depend upon its size, says Dean E. V. White of C. I. A. We do not know the formula for a successful marriage, but believe that one of the elements is expressed in that radio song, "Give a little, take a little."

It is alright to blow your own horn, but your neighbors have a right to expect you to keep it in tune.

In spite of the dry weather and Comanche County is not as dry as many other sections of Texas. Comanche County farmers have made fair crops this year. In some sections, corn has been good where it was planted early and well cultivated, other feed crops are fairly good and peanut hay is fine. Many farmers will have forage and hay enough to carry their livestock through the winter.

Passing tourists through Comanche have marveled at the melons, fruit and vegetables that have been sold here all during the summer.

One farmer said Saturday that the melon crop in this county would bring as much money this year as the cotton.

When Hilton Burks said that Comanche County was an easy place to make a living, in his talk over the radio at the Fort Worth Centennial last week, he made an impression on the radio artists. One said over the radio the next day, "Let us go to Comanche where we get that 'easy living.'"

Liquor is the arch enemy of the home, says the Bangs Gazette.

The old fashioned man who though a bathing suit was immodest, says The Dallas News, now has a granddaughter who thinks one is unnecessary.

We gave the Comanche Milling Company a little free advertising the other day at the Texas Centennial at Dallas when we visited the building, "Texas Under Six Flours" and registered in the book, filling in the blank provided for the name of the flour we use with "Hoff's Best."

Every large flour mill has a laboratory in which it tests each batch of flour before it goes out. If it is below standard it is corrected by adding a type of flour that brings it up to standard.

The laboratory tests the flour by baking a loaf of bread. Each loaf is then tested for color of crumb, column, absorption, crust color and character, evenness of bake, break and shread, symmetry, aroma, taste, texture and fermenting time.

Some people are so stingy that advice is all they will give away.

Now that the Comanche football season has opened, we will see who the true fans are. Many people don't mind cheering the home team when it is winning, but are the first and worst crabbies if it runs into a streak of hard luck.

In this machine age, much of the work formerly done by people is now done mechanically, even extending down into the child's work in the school room as is evident in the following change made in the old ditty about the number of days in each month:

"Thirty days has September
All the rest I don't remember
Why bother me at all
When there's a Calender on the wall"

Some one has said that the modern girl is wild because she does the things her grandmother wanted to do.

"Today we stand committed to the proposition that freedom is no half and half affair. If the average citizen is guaranteed equal opportunity at the polls, he must have equal opportunity in the market place."—President Roosevelt.

"Time like a river is flowing on. But yesterday we came on the scene And tomorrow we are gone."

If you see a man drowning, do not take time to pray if you can swim.

Gatesville is to have a new $53,000 post office building.

The Legislature is being called into a Special Session September 28 to raise taxes for the Old Age Pension Fund. If the taxes we have were all collected we would need no new ones. The county or State makes little effort to collect its taxes.

If the property owner is the sort of citizen, who believes in doing his full duty, says The Brady Standard, he voluntarily pays his taxes. If he is careless in the matter of meeting his obligations, if he is financially embarrassed, if he sees opportunity to use his available funds in some other line of endeavor or to some other purpose, he just ignores, overlooks or forgets his tax obligations. No special effort

THE STATE OF TEXAS.

To the Sheriff or any Constable of Comanche County—Greeting: You Are Hereby Commanded: That you summon by making Publication of this Citation in some newspaper published in the County of Comanche if there be a newspaper published therein, but if not, then in the nearest County where a newspaper is published, once in each week for four consecutive weeks previous to the return day hereof, the unknown heirs of M. D. Pendergrass, deceased, their heirs, assigns and legal representatives, whose residence is unknown, to be and appear before the Hon. District Court, at the next regular term thereof, to be held in the County of Comanche on the 19th day of October A. D. 1936 at the Court House thereof in Comanche County, Texas, and there to answer a petition filed in said Court, on the 7th day of September A. D. 1936, in a suit numbered on the docket of said Court No. 8156 wherein J. L. Cox is plaintiff and Joe Byrd, as guardian of the estate of Margaret Byrd, a minor; and of Joe Byrd, administrator of the estates of Mrs. M. E. Pendergrass, and M. D. Pendergrass, deceased, of Margaret Byrd, a minor, Deffey Pendergrass, and the unknown heirs of M. D. Pendergrass, deceased, defendants.

The nature of the plaintiff's demand being as follows, to-wit: Plaintiff alleges that he is the owner of an undivided one-half interest, the minor Margaret Byrd is the owner of an undivided one-fourth interest, and the heirs of M. D. Pendergrass, deceased, are the owners of the other undivided one-fourth interest in a certain tract of 191.4 acres of land in Comanche County, Texas out of the Thomas J. Blakemore Survey, Abs. No. 40, Sur. No. 61, formerly owned by W. T. Byrd, and fully set out and described in said petition.

The plaintiff asks that the defendants be cited, and that on final trial that said land be par-

CITATION BY PUBLICATION

THE STATE OF TEXAS.

To the Sheriff or any Constable of Comanche County—Greeting:

You are Hereby Commanded:

That you summon by making Publication of this Citation in some newspaper published in the County of Comanche if there be a newspaper published therein, but if not, then in the nearest County where a newspaper is published, one in each week for four consecutive weeks previous to the return day hereof, T. L. and G. R. Clayton whose residence is outside of this State and is unknown, to be and appear before the Hon. District Court, at the next regular term thereof, to be holden in the County of Comanche on the 19th day of October A. D. 1936 at the Court House thereof in the City of Comanche then and there to answer a petition filed in said Court, on the 15th day of September A. D. 1936, in a suit numbered on the docket of said Court No. 8091, wherein The Comanche National Bank is plaintiff and Otis and V. S. Clayton and T. L. and G. R. Clayton are defendants. The nature of the plaintiff's demand being as follows, to-wit:

Suit on a renewal note executed by Otis and V. S. Clayton on the 13th day of December A. D. 1934 and payable to the Comanche National Bank at Comanche, Texas, on June 12, 1935 for the sum of $477.65 and bearing 10 per cent interest from maturity and providing for 10 per cent attorneys fees if sued upon; and further alleging that V. S. Clayton theretofore on June 9, 1934 conveyed a tract of 105.7 acres of land out of the Wm. Nichols and John Bryan surveys in Comanche County, Texas, and known as the J. A. Jones place, without consideration, to T. L. and G. R. Clayton, sons, for a stated consideration of love and affection with the fraudulent purpose and with the intent of defrauding his creditors and especially defrauding this plaintiff; and plaintiff makes affidavit that unless attachment issues he will likely lose his debt and asks that attachment be levied on said 105.7 acres of land in Comanche County, Texas, conveyed by V. S. Clayton to T. L. and G. R. Clayton, sons, June 9, 1934 for love and affection as shown of record in Deed Records, Comanche County, Texas, Book 198 at Page 525, and asks that said deed be cancelled and plaintiff's attachment lien foreclosed and the land sold to satisfy said note, interest and attorney's fees.

Herein Fail Not, And have you before said Court, on the said first day of the next term thereof, this Writ with your endorsement thereon, showing how you have executed the same.

Given under my hand and seal of said Court, at office in Comanche, Texas this, the 15th day of September A. D. 1936.

BEN WILHELM, Clerk
District Court, Comanche County, Texas.

Strength During MIDDLE LIFE

Strength is extra-important for women going through the change of life. Then the body needs the very best nourishment to fortify it against the changes that are taking place.

In such cases, Cardul has proved helpful to many women. It increases the appetite and aids digestion, favoring more complete transformation of food into living tissue, resulting in improved nutrition and building up and strengthening of the whole system.

BOND ISSUE OF $35,000.00 IS VOTED BY STEPHENVILLE

By a vote of 228 to 187 property owning taxpayers of the city of Stephenville authorized a bond issue of $35,000.00 in an election held last Monday. The election had been called by the city council for the purpose of constructing a city recreational hall, a municipal swimming pool and a municipal golf course. At the same time application for a public grant of $23,000 has been made, the two totaling $58,000.00 for the expense of the three items.

School Program Explained Here By Authority

(By Co. Supt. B. Ray McCorkle)

The County Wide District Trustee and Superintendents' meeting held at the Comanche High School building, Saturday, Sept. 12th, proved to be very profitable. The general theme of the entire program, beginning with W. J. Fritts, representing the County Board, and Miss Opal Gilstrap and W. E. James representing the State Department, was that of developing better citizenship. Mr. James followed Mr. Fritts in a forceful speech substantiating his remarks, that each department was responsible for some particular work, and that the success or failure of each depended upon the co-operation of each interested party.

Miss Opal Gilstrap stressed the importance of the standardization of schools and complimented the county in securing two schools, Sabano and Van Dyke, last year. There are seven schools at this time that are eligible for standardization if they meet the requirements and the students of the respective schools pass the tests.

Miss Gilstrap was also impressed with the success of the County Library and the value it has been to the rural schools of the county. Just about half of the schools received the help of the library the past year. Soon after all the schools are open a committee will select a lot of new books to add to the present number, increasing it to about twice its size.

GROUP BIRTHDAY

Fifty-seven persons met at the home of W. W. J. McCarty Sunday, Sept. 13th, to celebrate the birthdays of Mrs. Ida McCarty, Miss Opal Fritts, Mrs. Opal Wilson, Mrs. C. L. Ellis, John Beaty, Mrs. Lorene Stewart, Mrs. Ethel Reed, Will Loudermilk, and Will Hendrix. Those present were, John Beayt and family, Mr. and Mrs. Ned Stewart, Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Ellis and family, Mr. and Mrs. Birch Wilson and family, Mr. and Mrs. Will Hendrix and family, Mr. and Mrs. Bob McNutt and family, Miss Ellen McNutt, Uncle Tom Hendrix, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Nabers, Mr. and Mrs. Olie Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Wilborn Hulsey and family, Mr. and Mrs. Grover Reed, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Fritts and family, Mrs. Delie Stewart and family, Geo. Pratt, Pauline Bratton, Johnnie Mae Johnson and Truman Bratton, and Mr. and Mrs. Dean Collins of Winters.

The menu consisted of fried chicken, chicken and dumplings, chicken and dressing, beef, vegetables, cakes and pies.

Will Rice Dies Suddenly Here

Will Rice, 37, visitor from Louisiana, died suddenly here Saturday at the home of his brother-in-law, Charlie E. Wilson, shortly after he was taken ill on the Comanche streets.

Dr. J. O. Lane pronounced his death due to acute indigestion.

Funeral services were held Sunday at the Whitney Cemetery in the Fleming community.

Mr. Rice came to Comanche County two weeks before his death to visit his sisters, Mesdames Wilson and Leslie Franklin.

He had made application for work on Highway No. 10.

ARIZONA MAN LEARNED ALPHABET FROM CHIEF

The following letter from T. G. Parker of Phoenix, Arizona, is self-explanatory:

"Enclosed is P. O. Money Order for which please let The Chief come on.

"I was just four years old in August, 1873, when The Chief came into existence and have been reading it ever since I could read, or have been reading it something over 58 years.

"I learned the alphabet partly on The Chief so really I owe a lot to it; and may it ever prosper."

A modern Cinderella departed from the Texas Centennial Exposition the other day to try for fame in Hollywood. She was Gertrude Robertson, West Texas ranch town of Lamesa, crowned Queen of the Centennial in a statewide competition. The 17-year-old platinum blonde was described as a perfect screen model.

The Santa Gertrudis Ranch House on the King Ranch is the finest farm house in the world. The Ranch is larger than the state of Delaware, and the front door of the house is 18 miles from the gate.

Funeral Rites Today For Mrs. Waldrop

Funeral rites will be held this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock for Mrs. W. R. Waldrop at the Siloam Cemetery with Rev. Walter Scott officiating.

Mrs. Waldrop, who lives alone was found lying unconscious on the floor early Wednesday morning by her son, J. R. Waldrop. She was dressed, but had her shoes off and it is believed that she fell soon after awakening. She died Thursday morning.

TELEPHONE POLE MAJOR SUFFERER IN FREAK ACCIDENT

A freak accident occurred about two miles east of Comanche late Saturday afternoon on Highway 36. O. C. Cottrell of Los Angeles, California, ran into a telephone pole in attempting to pass Troy Williams of Comanche. Mr. Williams signalled a left turn just as Mr. Cottrell pulled out to pass him. Mr. Cottrell in pulling back to the right lost control of the car and struck a forty foot pole with his left front wheel and fender.

The fore of the impact broke the pole into four main pieces. One piece remained in the ground and was cut off cleanly just a few inches above the surface. Another piece about ten feet long was thrown under the car and the crumpled wheel and fender were resting on it. A third piece about twenty feet long fell across the top of the car and dented the top enough that it remained balanced across the top. The fourth piece was left hanging to the phone wires. Mr. Cottrell was unhurt, but his car, a new sedan, was badly damaged.

Chapter One

Commencement exercises were over at Eastern Women's College. Karen and Martha, their diplomas tucked under their arms and feeling extraordinarily lonely, watched the happy scenes of reunion on the campus, girls embracing their fond parents, greeting their brothers and sisters. Karen was entirely alone in the world. Martha had only her aunt, Mrs. Mortar, a fluttering foolish woman, vaguely connected with the stage.

Mrs. Mortar, forever effervescent, rushed up to greet both girls. "Glorious, glorious day," she exclaimed. "Wouldn't have missed it for the world!"

"Yes, glorious," said Martha quietly and a little bitterly.

Mrs. Mortar turned intimately to Karen. "No matter how many sacrifices I made to send Martha here, they've all been worth it."

And after Martha promised to send her allowance for her left them to join—she said—her stock company.

Karen and Martha were left standing, staring into space, surveying a bleak future.

"What are you going to do?" asked Karen.

"I don't know, said Martha slowly. "Teach somewhere, I guess—if I can get a job."

Karen was suddenly struck with a plan. "I have a farm," she said. "My grandmother left it to me. We might start a school there—something of our own. We have got to do something. Oh, Martha! Take a chance with me and come!"

Martha and Karen walked from the railway station to where a 1922 Buick was parked, on which was tacked a home-made sign: "Taxi." The driver, a lean tall man, was seated on the rumpled board starting morosely out ahead.

"Could you take us out to Mulberry Road?" Karen inquired.

"It'll be five dollars," said Karen.

Karen was taken aback. Observing her reluctance, the taxi man added quickly, "I'll take you a shorter way. Be three dollars. Can't do better."

"Then let's go by the three dollar way," said Karen gaily. They got into the car. The taxi driver started it suddenly and the car jumped forward almost jerking them out of their seats.

"Always acts that way on the three dollar trip," the driver explained.

Three dollar way or five dollar way, the car eventually came to a stop at a dilapidated old mansion, with grounds completely gone to seed, wild underbrush sprung up everywhere, the picket fence in ruins, the entire effect one of complete rundown, uninvited in shabbiness. Karen's excited happiness completely vanished.

Slowly she and Martha walked down the path to the house, stared horror-stricken at the broken windows.

"Oh, I know, dear," said Martha finally.

"It doesn't matter, Karen," said Martha finally.

Chapter Two

Martha was busily engaged ripping the old wall paper from the main hall when she heard the familiar chug of Dr. Cardin's car. Her face lit up, but she continued busy at her task. Dr. Cardin grinned when he saw her.

"I remember you," he said, "when your face was clean."

They were chatting gaily when Karen's voice came from the top landing of the staircase.

"That you, Joe?" she called.

"Come on, Joe. I need help."

Cardin responded with too obvious alacrity. Martha's face grew sad, and slowly she returned to her task.

A new source of grief awaited her. The sound of a car was again heard along the road, and soon a cherubic head poked into the open window, and a chirping voice called into the room:

"Hello. Hello. Hello!"

It was Mrs. Mortar. Martha tried hard, but unsuccessfully, to make her greeting cordial. Karen came down the stairs with Cardin. They were carrying a chair between them. Karen dropped her end of the chair at the sight of Mrs. Mortar. But that lady was delighted.

"How well you look," she said to Martha. "Almost pretty." And to Karen. "Karen, my dear. Prettier than ever."

"I thought you were working," said Mrs. Mortar to Martha.

"I was," Mrs. Mortar said. "Martha was determined to get it over with. 'Aunt Lily, er—' is this a visit? You see, we're not very well equipped here now. We've been having a hard time."

"Oh, I know," exclaimed Mrs. Mortar cheerily. "That's why I'm here; to put my shoulder to the wheel with you. I knew you'd need an elocution teacher and a general supervisor. That's why I came. And until you get started, I shall take only the slightest fee for my services."

Martha began to laugh hysterically. Karen crossed over to her hastily and pressed her arm.

"It's quite all right, Martha."

In this fashion Mrs. Mortar insisted that she was operating a beauty parlor.

Chapter Three

The news of Karen's and Dr. Cardin's engagement was broken to Martha. She gave no outward sign of being affected save that her congratulations were a little forced. All were serene at the farmhouse when Dr. Cardin one evening came to pay a visit to Karen. He poked his head into the door, and seeing no one, he called softly. Martha came out of her bedroom, paintbrush in hand, and called down to him.

"Karen went into town for supplies. She'll be back later. Stop making such a row and come on up and help me paint a table."

But when Dr. Cardin entered her room he flung himself at once on the studio couch.

"How's the hospital?" Martha inquired, instantly solicitous.

Cardin yawned. "Just the same. No money, bad laboratory, everybody growing at everybody else."

He stretched himself. "So quiet here. It's like a tomb. 'But the girls are in bed, and Aunt Lily is worn out from doing nothing.'"

Cardin shook his head in sympathy for what Martha had to put up with.

"You must have had a fine childhood," he said.

She had indeed! Eagerly, with a sudden release of reticence, she began to tell him all about it. Cardin was tired and sleepy, but made polite efforts to listen.

Every time the stock company would move, I'd move with it. . . . And at night, I'd have to do my homework sitting on a dirty box backstage, jumping up to help Aunt Lily change from a blowy costume to an even blowier one. I used to be so alone and so sorry that I couldn't have what other little girls—"

She broke off suddenly. "I'm running out of paint. Want a glass of milk?"

But Cardin was asleep. Martha approached the couch and stroked his arm tenderly. Then she turned off the light above her chair. She tiptoed to the chair, picked up a book, but did not read. Her eyes, tender and affectionate, rested on Dr. Cardin.

An hour later, Martha was still in the chair, and Dr. Cardin was still sleeping soundly. The chimes of the clock in the hall downstairs struck eleven. Martha moved restlessly, and his arm hit the glass of milk, overturning it. A bowl of fruit dropped to the floor with a crash. Cardin jumped up bewildered. Martha was already by his side, picking up the bowl and wiping up the spilled milk.

Dr. Cardin began to apologize, wiping the milk that had spilled on his tie and shirt, and on his coat. The voice of Mrs. Mortar broke in suddenly.

"You can borrow a little money from the bank," he explained, and fix up the old place with free help, too. I'm a good carpenter, house painter, and a good plumber."

Martha was stony for him. "We won't starve," Karen said.

"We'd have free honey."

Karen suddenly took fright. "Why are we talking to this young man this way," she said trying to disguise her uneasiness with a laugh. "As if we had known him all our lives."

"That happens some times," Dr. Cardin said with a half smile, but his voice was warm and serious.

stalled herself. Otherwise, the school got started without any mishaps. There were already fourteen pupils, and Martha and Karen were happy that they could ever remember. Twelve-year-old Mary Tilford, of all the young girls, presented the only difficulty. There was a preposterous streak in the girl that made her lie when there was no need for lying, a propensity for malice that prompted her to poke her nose into everybody's affairs, and a willingness that enabled her to acquit out of all responsibility for her misdeeds.

Only Karen was too clever for her. Only Karen she cordially hated. And Martha, too, the little biter never forgave, for having caught her using a pony in translating her Latin exercises.

This sort of stuff was trifling, however, for a storm that was brewing among the pupils themselves, because of Mary's delight in scandal. And then there was the incident of a gold bracelet that was missing and hadn't been found.

Karen was waiting that day, and it was the most natural thing in the world that she should find herself in the afternoon sipping a soda with Dr. Cardin.

"You look tired," Cardin said suddenly.

"Take a vacation with me this afternoon. It's what you need. I know just the place to go."

"No. Certainly not," said Karen sternly and prissily. "I've got to go back."

"Why do you have to go back? Chickens can wait."

"No, they can't. I've got to—"

Karen lifted her bodily from the stool before she could finish the sentence, and started hurriedly for the door. The soda clerk jumped from behind the counter and solicitously opened the door.

"Bad, Doc," the clerk inquired, pointing to Karen, who was kicking and protesting.

"No," Cardin answered. "A mild fit."

Despite the fact that she had been virtually kidnapped, Karen enjoyed herself tremendously at the country place where Dr. Cardin had taken her. She rode on the merry-go-round, danced like a little girl through all the exhibits, and gorged herself on cake and ice-cream. But, strangely enough, the merrier she grew, the gloomier Dr. Cardin became. He was trying to speak seriously about something all afternoon, but Karen had been in no mood to listen to him. Until, finally, she noticed a sharpness in his tone towards her. She was surprised, but too happy to be angry.

"What's the matter with you?" she asked.

"This is what's the matter with me," Cardin fairly shouted. "I'm in love with you. I've been trying to tell you for an hour. Now, I'm tired out, see, and I can't tell you—"

SURPRISE PARTY GIVEN

The young people of the Garland Community surprised Miss Marie Abney, a 1936 honor graduate of Garland High School, with a party Saturday night, Sept. 12th.

There were a number of young people in attendance and a delicious refreshment plate was served. Mrs. Truman Phifer, the honoree's sister, formerly of Breckenridge, was appointed as hostess by the young people.

Chapter Four

When Martha closed the door upon the two girls she accidentally bruised Rosalie's arm. It was a slight bruise, but one that was later to take on damaging import.

Meanwhile, Mary was nursing injuries of another sort. She had come out of her room, and had been upon Karen. Her faint had convinced nobody, and Dr. Cardin's examination revealed clearly that she was faking.

"How does it feel to be back from the grave?" he inquired of Mary with mock solicitude.

"It's my heart," Mary said stubbornly. "and it hurts."

"Science has failed," Cardin said to Karen. "Try a hair brush."

Mary, her prestige with her fellow pupils entirely destroyed, tricked revenge. The opportunity, unfortunately, was only to close at hand. Thoughtlessly, Evelyn and Rosalie repeated to her the conversation they had overheard. Mary's eyes gleamed.

"I'm going home," she said suddenly.

"She turned ferociously upon Rosalie, who was shifting some clothes out of the bureau drawer.

"You've got two dollars and twenty-five cents. I need it for a taxi. Get it for me."

When Rosalie refused, Mary grabbed her suddenly by her injured arm. Rosalie dropped the bundle she was carrying. The missing gold bracelet dropped to the floor with a clang.

Rosalie stared at the bracelet and gasped in pain. "That's my sore arm," she pleaded. "Don't—"

Mary only pressed the harder. "Just say when you've had enough."

"The pain you're inflicting on me is unbearable," Rosalie pleaded helplessly.

Mary entered her home alone, leaving Rosalie waiting outside. Her welcome was not a cordial one. Mrs. Mortar, for all her weakness for her granddaughter, was not to be easily disposed of. Learning that Mary had left school without permission, she sternly ordered her to return. Mary became hysterical.

"Send me back!" she pleaded. "I can't! They'll kill me, grandma. They will, they will!"

"What makes you say such terrible things?" Mrs. Mortar asked. "They're true," Mary insisted through her tears. "Honest, I faint today."

Mrs. Mortar cried out in alarm: "Fainted?"

"Yes, I did. My heart. I had a pain in my heart and Dr. Cardin said I didn't have any pain and—"

Mrs. Mortar breathes a sigh of relief.

LONGVIEW—Oil center and gateway to the famous East Texas Oil Field, the world's largest. Kil-

"I heard a strange crash," she said breathlessly.

Suddenly she noticed Dr. Cardin. "It was me," he said pleasantly. "I was wrestling with myself."

Mrs. Mortar said not amused. "You're late, visitor, aren't you?"

"Oh, no. I've really been here for four days. I was hiding in your trunk, Goodnight. 'Night, Martha."

"I hope I'm not hurrying you," said Mrs. Mortar acidly.

"Not any more than usual," he answered briskly.

Mrs. Mortar was not the only one who had responded to the crash, and placed a suspicious interpretation on the scene. Mary Tilford had been awake, too, and had heard enough of the conversation to awaken her interest. She heard Martha crying after Mrs. Mortar had left. This fact, too, she stored in her malicious little head for future reference.

The next day, Mary arrived late to Mrs. Mortar's elocution task. But she was not embarrassed in the least. When Mrs. Mortar began to upbraid her she held out a bunch of wild flowers.

"I went to get these flowers," she said. "You told us you loved flowers and I walked so far to find them for you." Her voice broke, even as she turned to wink to the other pupils.

Mrs. Mortar was completely mollified. Karen entered the room at this juncture, however, and was at once struck by the flow of Mary's tears.

"Near Conway's cornfield," said Mary slowly.

"It wasn't necessary to go that far," said Karen sternly. "There was a garden like that in the garage can this morning."

The class gasped. But Mary stuck to her lie, in the face of all upbraidings, accusations and pleadings. And when Karen threatened to punish her by taking away her allowance, Mary suddenly gasped and staggered back.

"My heart! It's my heart! It's stopped or something. I can't breathe. I—I can't—"

She let out a choked scream, and fell to the floor.

Karen, despite her skepticism, sent for Dr. Cardin. He confirmed her suspicions. The child was playing-acting to escape punishment.

While the examination was going on, Martha was having it out with Mary.

"The school is no place for you," she said firmly. "Why don't you take the trip to London you've been dreaming of. I have the money."

But Aunt Lily proved contrary. "You only want to get rid of me," she said nastily. "Turning me out, at my age. I refuse to be shipped off. Next season I shall go back to the stage."

"No," Martha repeated. "I want you to go sooner."

Aunt Lily smiled sarcastically. "I know why you want to be rid of me. I know what's going on. You're never smart about hiding things. Why, you're in love with him. Of course, I myself am a little old-fashioned and I couldn't help being shocked by what was going on."

Martha trembled with rage. "Be still, Aunt Lily. Be still! How can you—these shameful lies!"

But Mrs. Mortar persisted. "That night when I was coming out of your room, I saw—"

There was a sudden noise behind the door. Martha opened it suddenly, to find Evelyn and Rosalie outside. They had been eavesdropping!

relief, Mary saw that she had overreached herself, and subsided some what. But after dinner, Mary resumed her complaint.

"You don't love me," she moaned. "You don't care what happens to me. You don't care whether the kill me or not!"

Mrs. Mortar made a gesture of despair. "What makes you talk like that, Mary?"

"It's because I'm scared, Grandma. I'm scared. They've got something against me and they punish me for everything. Today they even said I couldn't go to the box races!"

Mary observed an amused, dismissive smile appear on her grandmother's face.

"But it wasn't that," she added hastily. "It's things. Funny things. They've got secrets. Grandma. Fun my secrets." She did not take her eyes off her grandmother's face, watching her watch for the effect of her words. "All about Miss Dobie, she continued, "and Dr. Cardin and Mrs. Mortar told Miss Dobie she knew what was going on."

Mrs. Mortar's attention was for the first time arrested.

"What? What was that?"

"That she knew what was going on," Mary said speaking quickly.

"and she always had known about what was going on. And Miss Dobie said she'd have to get out of the house. And that's why we have to move our room. I bet. Because she's frightened and she'll tell things, too. And that's why they punish me. I guess they know about how I couldn't help hearing about that awful night."

"What awful night?" asked Mrs. Mortar tensely.

Mary looked sure of herself now. Slowly she built up her whole scandalous narrative, whispering the most monstrous charges.

Mrs. Mortar was horrified. "Do you know what you're saying? Are you telling the truth?"

Mary rattled on. "Honest, Honest. And today there was an awful row and Mrs. Mortar said they were putting her out because she couldn't be fooled and she knew about the things that were happening and she told me to get out."

And that said she had to get out right away—and it was things like that all the time. And Mrs. Mortar said that was why they were putting her out, and—"

"What do you know what Mrs. Mortar said?"

"Because Rosalie and Evelyn heard them," Mary said excitedly. "And Miss Dobie got mad when she found out that they heard, and she told them to tell Mrs. Mortar and hurt it—"

She was suddenly struck with an inspiration. "Wait a minute Grandma," she said, and ran out of the room, returning with Rosalie, whose arm she had carefully bandaged in advance.

"See, Grandma? See how they hurt her arm?"

"Rosalie!" Mrs. Mortar said. "Is your mother still in New York?"

Rosalie nodded in bewilderment. "Yes, you'll stay here until she returns."

"Grandma," Mary inquired softly. "Do I have to go back to that awful place?"

"No," said Mrs. Mortar grimly. "You won't have to go back."

"We can't stay here," Dr. Cardin argued. "We must start again and start quick—with all this far behind us."

HUGH CARLTON NOMINATED FOR EASTLAND CONSTABLE

Tex Carlton, the big league baseball pitcher, who is about as good as the best this year, is not the only member of the Carlton family originating at Comanche who is gaining recognition.

Hugh Carlton, in the recent primary was nominated for Constable of Precinct No. 1 at Eastland, defeating the incumbent who had held the office for ten years according to his brother, Frank Carlton of Comanche.

Chapter Five

The day that followed was a nightmare for Karen and Martha. Without notice, and without explanation, mothers began calling for their daughters or sending their chauffeurs to bring them home. The children were bewildered as were their teachers. Karen and Martha finally learned from one of the chauffeurs what had happened. He was a broadminded chauffeur.

If you ask me," he said, "it's none of the old ladies' business what goes on after the kids go to sleep."

Dr. Cardin, who had overheard, rushed forward. "Get out of here!" he yelled. "Get out of here quick!"

Karen began to cry.

"Don't, darling," Cardin said. "I know; I've heard."

Martha leaned helplessly against the door. "What's happened to us?" she inquired desperately. "What are they doing to us? We're being kicked about by crazy people!"

Dr. Cardin straightened up. "We've got a fight on our hands," he said. "And it's got to be the best fight we know how to make. Come on!"

He went together with him the two girls went to Mrs. Mortar's home to demand an explanation. Mrs. Mortar received them politely but coldly.

"I don't think you should come here, Miss Wright. I was going to see you tomorrow to explain my position in all this. I am deeply sorry that you had to be involved."

"I think we had better understand each other," said Karen quietly. "There is nothing for us to explain"—she made a gesture that included the three of them—and "I much dislike your sympathy."

Dr. Cardin, too, was indignant. "What were we expected to do, Mrs. Mortar? Were we supposed to lie down and grin until you finished kicking us around with these lies?"

Mrs. Mortar refused to be moved either by their threats or entreaties. She believed the rumor and she had her duties towards innocent children. But Dr. Cardin persisted.

"When three people come to you with their lives spread on a table for you to cut to pieces, then the only honest thing to do is to give them one last chance to come out alive. We want that last chance. If you are honest, you'll give it to us."

Mrs. Mortar pursed her lips, but then nodded. "Very well," she said slowly, and ordered Mary brought in. The room's door opened, and Mrs. Mortar examined her face, the cross examination boldly at first, answering the questions in a sweet, clear and innocent voice that drove poor Martha almost insane.

But as Dr. Cardin persisted in his questioning certain discrepancies appeared in her stories. Mary was unable to explain definitely the location of the vague hints that had worked so well

Less Monthly Discomfort

Many women, who formerly suffered from a weak, run-down condition as a result of poor assimilation of food, say they benefited by taking CARDUI, a special medicine for women. They found it helped to increase the appetite and improve digestion, thereby bringing them more strength from their food.

Naturally there is less discomfort at monthly periods when the system has been strengthened and the various functions restored and regulated.

Cardui, praised by thousands of women, is well worth trying. Of course, if not benefited, consult a physician.

MORE ABOUT

determining the amount of trade. People like to go to places where they can drive in comfort. Comanche County has done much to improve the roads leading into the county seat within the last few years and work is now underway on several other projects and plans call for still further improvements.

Another major factor in selecting a trading point is whether or not it is a good market for farm products. Comanche for many years has enjoyed the distinction of being the best marketing place in this section for poultry, cream, butter, eggs, etc. It has a good market for cotton, wool, mohair, peanuts, hay, corn, grain, and all other farm products.

The Comanche merchants as a rule believe in advertising. They know that their merchandise and prices are fair and are not afraid to let the people know about them. If a merchant has something the people want, and is willing to sell it at the right price, the people will buy it if they can find out about it.

The Comanche Chief goes into practically every representative home in the county and enjoys the distinction of having one of the largest circulation lists of any weekly paper in Texas.

The Comanche business men and women extend you a cordial invitation to do your fall trading in Comanche. If you have nothing to buy or sell, come to Comanche any way and enjoy the crowd. You will enjoy the good fellowship of the Comanche people.

BLACK WIDOW SPIDERS
BITE WHEN DISTURBED

The "Black Widow" spider continues to be a menace even though the number of persons bitten is comparatively small, according to morbidity reports received by the State Department of Health. The habit of this spider in building its web in dimly lighted places makes it difficult to establish any effective method of control.

Though the "Black Widow" is frequently found in basements, wood sheds, and other places which have dark corners or recesses, more cases of spider poisoning have been reported in past years have occurred in old toilets in the rural districts. The toilets in cracks and crevices, particularly around the seats of old toilets, are an invaluable procedure, but precautions must be taken against fire. The egg cocoon may also be crushed.

The adult female spider is a shiny black body with a brilliant half an inch long and has a scarlet hourglass marking on the under surface. The name, "Black Widow" is revived from the fact that the female kills and eats the male after mating.

The web of the "Black Widow" is characterized by the fact that the strands are tough. If a straw is applied to the web of an ordinary house spider, the web will immediately break, but if a straw be stroked through a "Black Widow" web, the strands will be found to be so tough that the straw will bend or even break. The female spider stays close to her web but will rush out and attack violently any object disturbing this web.

The "Black Widow" is not an aggressive spider, and rarely bites unless disturbed. Acute pain develops in the region of the surface bitten, spreading to other parts of body. There is a general muscle contraction, difficult breathing, cold perspiration, nausea and an extreme rigidity of the abdomen.

The general public should be taught to recognize the "Black Widow" to take the necessary precautions, and to consult a physician immediately, if bitten.

Mrs. T. J. Mayes
Dies Suddenly Here

Mrs. T. J. Mayes, 87, died at her home near Comanche last Thursday following a few hours of illness. Funeral services were held Friday afternoon at the local Methodist Church and interment was in Oakwood Cemetery.

Pall bearers were A. S. Harris, H. Burks, E. R. Armstrong, L. F. Elkins, Everett Murphy, and O. H. Donaho.

Mrs. Mayes, who was Frances Elizabeth Martin before her marriage, was born in Georgia March 28, 1849, being the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Martin.

She was married in Kaufman County, Texas, 67 years ago to Tom J. Mayes who died at Comanche in 1921. Mr. and Mrs. Mayes moved from Kaufman County to Gorman, coming from the latter place to Comanche in 1907.

Children surviving include Mrs. Martha Herring with whom she was making her home, Mrs. J. I. Mayes of Mexia, Mrs. Pearl Herring of Roswell, New Mexico, Will A. Mayes of Comanche, J. A. Mayes of Wichita Falls, Mrs. H. V. McCorkle of Cisco, and Mrs. C. W. Griffin of Valley Park, Mo.

Surviving also is a brother, Frank Martin, and a sister, Miss Lola Martin of Bridgeport.

Mrs. Mayes had been a member of the Methodist Church since childhood.

MARLIN—Noted as spa and health resort. Deepest and strongest hot mineral water wells in the world located here. Glass dipped in the water takes on a beautiful amber color which will take a highly finished polish. There is nothing yet known that will remove the color from this glass.

KERRVILLE—Largest primary wool and mohair market in the world. Popular Hill Country summer resort. One of the best deer and wild turkey hunting sections in Texas. Kerrville was settled by Germans in 1847.

LA GRANGE—Those killed in Dawson's party, that went to the relief of San Antonio in 1842, are buried on Monument Hill; also, victims of "Black Bean" lottery of the Mier expedition.

LANGTRY—Here the famous "hall of justice" in the Jersey Lily Saloon, presided over by Roy Bean, "the law West of the Pecos", still stands. The town was named for Lily Langtry, famous actress. At the turn of the century this town was still the wild frontier cattle town of fact and fiction.

MENARD—San Saba Mission, founded by Franciscan fathers in middle of 18th century, is located here. Headquarters for General Robert E. Lee during Mexican War of 1846.

NACOGDOCHES—Site of Old Stone Fort of Spanish Days. Many of the officers of the Texas Republic lived here, including President Sam Houston. General Thomas J. Rusk, provisional secretary of war, and Colonel John Forbes, commissary-general.

Football Fans to Match Skill
Against "Galloping Ghost"

"Red" Grange, famous "Galloping Ghost" off for a touch-down.

CAN you outsmart "Red" Grange, football hero, famous as the "Galloping Ghost," at forecasting results of football games? Gridiron fans will have an opportunity this fall to match their skill against that of "Red" Grange, in forecasting results of the country's major football battles in a new Sinclair "Red" Grange Football Radio Contest.

Beside pitting their skill against "Red" Grange, entrants in the football-score contest will have an opportunity to qualify for over 120 prizes awarded weekly, including a deluxe Chevrolet, Ford or Plymouth sedan, twenty Philco Radios, fifty boxes of half dozen pairs of Real Silk Hosiery and fifty Spalding footballs autographed by H. F. Sinclair and "Red" Grange. Entry blanks for each week's contest are available to readers of this newspaper beginning September 12th at all Sinclair service stations, and the scores of each Saturday's games will be displayed at those stations. "Red" Grange, himself announces over the air his own forecasts, the scores of from sixty to a hundred games, and the principal winners in each week's contest which runs throughout the football season.

CITATION BY PUBLICATION
THE STATE OF TEXAS.

To the Sheriff or any Constable of Comanche County—Greeting:

You Are Hereby Commanded, That you summon by making Publication of this Citation in some newspaper published in the County of Comanche if there be a newspaper published therein, but if not, then in the nearest County where a newspaper is published, one in each week for four consecutive weeks previous to the return day hereof, C. D. Everitt whose residence is unknown, to be and appear before the Hon. District Court, at the next regular term thereof, to be held in the County of Comanche on the 19th day of October 1936 at the Court House thereof in the City of Comanche then and there to answer a petition filed in said Court on the 17th day of September A. D. 1936, in a suit numbered on the docket of said Court No. 8159, wherein Vervia Everitt is plaintiff and C. D. Everitt is defendant.

The nature of the plaintiff's demand being as follows, to-wit: Suit for divorce, custody of plaintiff's and defendant's children on grounds of adultery, excesses and cruel treatment of such nature as to render further living together insupportable; that lots 2 and 7 in Block 9 Bonners Addition to the city of Comanche, Texas be set apart for the use of plaintiff and said children, that defendant be required to contribute to the support of the children at least $25.00 per month and $25.00 per month alimony and that defendant be enjoined from coming about the plaintiff or said children or removing the children from the plaintiff's custody and for costs.

Herein Fail Not. And have you before said Court, on the said first day of the next term thereof, this writ with your endorsement thereon, showing how you have executed the same.

Given under my hand and seal of said Court, at office in Comanche this, the 17th day of September A. D. 1936.

BEN WILHELM, Clerk District Court Comanche County, Texas. (8-11)

PROCTOR BASKETBALL
GIRLS ORGANIZE

Under the supervision of Vernon Welch, Proctor girls have organized their 1936-37 basketball team.

Jack Higginbotham was elected Captain and the following girls have been selected as members: Maxine Nichols, Mildred Higginbotham, Essie Stephens, Eunice Smith, Juanita Ewing, Freddie Sturkie, Edith Luker, Frankie Trimble, Dorothy Purvis, Marie Norris and Kathleen Sturkie.

Both coach and captain have stressed sportsmanship and cooperation in their play.

Eat a pound of pecans and you have the equivalent of three pounds of beefsteak—with a consequent saving of cash. That is the analysis of pecan experts at the Texas Centennial Exposition who donned aprons and demonstrated the many ways in which pecans could be made appealing to jaded appetites.

Sistie and Buzzie Dall, the President's grandchildren, recently visited the Texas Centennial Exposition. In company with their father, they saw the educational sights, but had an eye only for the ferris wheel on the Midway, where they spent most of their time.

Mike Sullivan went to Dallas this week to visit Ernest Tupin and Mrs. Joe Tupin who are receiving treatment at Dallas hospitals.

Booker T. Washington (Negro) High School of Dallas will go in strong for inter-state grid games in the Cotton Bowl, Texas Centennial Exposition this fall. Three of its six games at the Exposition will be with out of state schools, Tulsa, Ardmore and Oklahoma City.
